This series prepares massage therapists to work safely with patients or clients who have experienced some form of trauma. It integrates evidence-based trauma literature with ways to assess client safety. It also demonstrates how to avoid client touch triggers while providing client centered care within a massage therapist's scope of practice. Within the framework of the webinar, participants engage in professional discussion and case-based learning.

Each 2-hour module consists of a webinar lecture followed by a Q and A session. Participants are encouraged to bring questions or share cases confidentially. You must enroll for the entire series. It is not possible to attend single sessions. The series is based on the text: Fitch, P. (2019, 2nd Ed.). Talking Body Listening Hands: A guide to professionalism, communication and the therapeutic relationship. Ottawa: AC Press. A digital copy of the text is provided to each participant.
